

Participants Needed for Window Navigation Study

We are conducting a study on window navigation and are looking for people who would like to be participants.

If you choose to take part in the study, you will be asked to find a series of specified windows among many already open within an application. There are defined methods which you will be asked to use to select the windows. We will also ask you about the commands you prefer to use for selecting windows.

The experiment will last approximately 20 minutes. In compensation of your time, you will receive a $5 gift card for a local coffee shop.

If you are interested in participating, please send email to Craig Miller (cmiller@cs.depaul.edu).

Thank you for your attention!
